CHAPTER 17 - EXPERIENCE

Okay, so I don't have a camera..BUT..what I DO have..is experience. I was able to send my closest friends an email of my script and they were able to get down a certain scene. Now, I have been working, So all we did was a single scene containing the 3 main characters in the story. Coincidentally, The 3 friends I got were the same three friends that I based THEIR character off of, and I gotta say, it went better than expected. I was able to schedule a small meet- up with them while hanging out and was able to act out a particular scene. I pretty much told them how I wanted it done and they did it like that. It was a lot of fun. My friends were actually able to act it out pretty accurately and to my sayings. There were of course some mistakes (There are always mistakes) here and there but we were able to act out the scene that we wanted to be acted out. It took about..an hour and 30. Friends kept forgetting their lines. But that's really the only problem we had the entire time- forgetting the lines from the scene of the script. We were only able to do a scene that consisted of the 3 main friends in the script. We just couldn't find a good working meet-up schedule, seeing how the 3 main girls that were going to join us in audition how their own busy schedule, such as the usual work job and with boyfriend of family. I didn't want to wait for weeks on end just so everyone can get together, so we just decided to do the 3 of us, which still turned out to work really well. There were also some moments when they actually came up with their own ideas and asked whether or not I liked them or not. I DID like some of them but others I did not. I mean, we really got into it. My friends wanted to audition for more lines and scenes and I said , "I mean, if you want." We then did another scene but never really did it. We fooled around and just started watching tv so. But I can faithfully say that everything went honestly better than expected. And honestly, once again, if I could, I would audition them for the actual movie and have them actually ACT in the film itself, since they were so cool with it and really enjoyed doing it. That's all I can really say on that matter though, otherwise I would just start to repeat myself of the things that I had already gone over about it. If we were to do things again, The only thing I would really do differently is try to do a more complicated scene with more dialogue and see how far we could get with that. But otherwise, that's about it.
